A SHOWER OF POEMS. Editors Dispatch; I enclose some verse that I think appeared in your paper some time past. I should like you to republish them, with the author's name, if it is known; and by doing so you greatly oblige,

Yours very truly, To -"My heart aches sore for thee, to-night, b-leved; For memory, flashing o'er my soul again, Hath brought to mind with fearful vividness, be-

Hain brought to made had been also had been agonizing anguish of the first great pain. If I had only been by thee, beloved—
Had laid thy poor bruised head upon my breast:
Had caught the last glance of thine eyes, beloved, With ca'mer beart i'd yield thee to thy rest if I had only pressed upon thy lips, beloved, One agonizing kiss ere life had fied:
Had told thee of my all soul-filling love for thee, I could more calmly mourn thee now as dead.

"When in your manly strength and beauty, loved You sinned as you bade me a fond 'Good-bye,'
Thank God you knew not 'twas for life, my dar And, though I sorrowed at the parting, nor did I.
The blow which took thy pure young life, beloved—
That life more precious than a score of mine—
Has cut the tendrils of my own poor life, beloved,
By which it clung so closely unto thine.

By which it clung so closely unto thine.
Oh! could I feel the clasp of thy strong 2rms, be Gaze but one moment in my darling's eyes—
All India's gems I'd deem too valueless
And were they mine I'd give them for the prize.

"But, oh! thy precious, fair young face, my loved Thy form so strong-thy brave, true heart & They sleep; and 'round their resting-place, be-loved. The night winds sigh that sweep 'cld Bland-ford's 'hitl. ford's' hitl.

All through the weary years to come, beloved—
Each one of which is wrapped in darkest gloom—
There seems for me no bappiness, beloved,
Until I re ch the portal of the tomb.
Ah! then there's joy for years of weary anguish;
Ah! then there's bilss for all the time to come;
No parting on that heavenly shore, my darling.
From thee, who only went the sooner home."

[We don't know the author's name.] [Written for the Weekly Richmond Dispatch.] Grant Me Your Prayers.

BY LISWON DNALTUR. Two hearts and lives must beneeforth servered be Each must now take up life's dull round of cares, And in its duties each must seek relief And the its duries each must seek reflet.
From memories which often end in pain.
When, in your lonely hours, a thought shall come
of what I was in happier days to you.
Take that thought as a message from my soul
To yours. Know that no anger burns in mine
Against you now. Against you now.

We never more may meet on life's rough way.
Our destinies forever he apart.
Still one sweet bond is ours. You have my prayers.
I trust yours still ascend to Heaven for me.
There, at our Father's throne, we still may meet,
And He will lighten all our earthly grief's
And teach us both submission to His will.
Grant me your prayers! Grant me your prayers!

If, in the coming years, a wife's fond love Shall cheer your lonely heart and make life bright, I shall rejoice that happiness has crowned At last your sacrificing, fond, true heart. I hope that all the samess, which, till now, Has clouded o'er your lot, will be dispelled. Ever I'll thank our God for all the joy He sends to you, and count as blessings rare All thought of you.

(We say to our correspondent that we know of no southern paper which pays for roctical contributions. We are overwhelmed with them-gladly furnished gratis.]

> [Written for the Weekly Dispatch.] Dedicated to a Friend. I am thinking of my first-born, The white lamb of my fold, With eyes as blue as Heaven, And curls of flossy gold.

My beautiful, fair flower, That wither'd ere it bloom'd, And cheered me but an hour The Master-Hand then cull'd it In fairer scenes to dwell, 'Mid amaranthine bowers,

Oh! baby curls have nestled Since then upon my breast, And baby arms have folded Round me in roft caress—

But still my heart must linger

It is the earthy casket
That holds my jewel rare;
But above my baby liveth,
The fairest of the fair.

A cherub which I've given The Scraph Band of Love, Whose snowy pinions beckon His mother's soul above. EURAL VALLEY, LOUISA COUNTY, February 7.

Editors Richmond Dispatch: Gentlemen,-I would like to know whose business it is to see that the "stop-cocks' of the "city gas- and water-works" are put in properly. Some of them pro!rude two or three inches above the pavement, and are very disagreeable to persons who are not always on the lookout for them. Gote. [Perhaps the pavement is below gradethe fault of the land-owner.]

A HUNDRED-THOUSAND-DOLLAR FORGERY CASE. - Philadelphia, April 3.- Nearly a year ago a case was tried in this city, in which Alexander Ervin was charged, at the instance of Henry G. Morris, with having forged a paper purporting to be an agreement on the part of the latter to allow the defendant $100,000 as his share of certain operations in pig-iron connected with the Southwark foundry, of which Mr. Morris was the proprietor and Alexander Ervin the confidential clerk. The jury were unable to agree, and after twelve days' confinement were discharged. Meanwhile a civil suit was pending against Ervin to compel him to render an account, and the case was referred to a master. The master finds that the paper purporting to be an agreement is a forgery. That Ervin, while in the employ of Henry G. Morris as confidental agent and financial manager, did not truly account for moneys passing to his control, and orders that he pay to his assignee for the creditors the sum of $158.288.57, which was due June the 30th, 1875. The decree includes interest on the notes used by Ervin.
